You can make significant improvements in the living room, which brings color, taste and practical storage even to the smallest areas. Who says you have to be tame? Your creative expression can be wild in a small living room. Striking pieces and regrouping a room can have a big impact on how you use and interact with a small space. If you can't go wide, go upstairs. Use your walls or vertical space for storage, art and accent pieces. The walls are an unused space in a small living room for creative expression and practical use of space. Everything from furniture to statuettes can decorate your walls. Feel free to use bold pieces that show off your design aesthetic and personal style. Dark colors actually close the space. By maintaining the walls and decoration of a small space of white or bright color, you give the perception of more space. On a small area, make the most of natural light with minimal window coverings and allow the light to fill the space. Let your living room be your canvas. The best thing about neutral colors is that they let bright accent pieces and furniture pop. Keep the room colored in a neutral palette and add pop-up colors. It can range from ice blues to burnt oranges. The choice is yours. asbe/Getty Images Have you ever heard it say about itself vertical stripes? Just as the vertical stripes on your body create the illusion of height, vertical lines on the walls create the illusion of higher ceilings. The key to as much space as possible is to emphasize its properties. Avoid space congestion after adding vertical highlights with paint or decals. Bare walls extend the vertical effect. KatarzynaBialasiewicz / Getty Images When decorating a small living room, be practical. There's no room for hope chests or other items that occupy precious real estate floors. Adding racks and other wall storage solutions keeps the room flow and open. As a bonus, you have a cute place to keep your stuff. KatarzynaBialasiewicz / Getty Images No space should go to waste. A mid-century cupboard can deliver a tasteful accent to a room that serves as a storage space for private items. If you're back against the wall, this is the place to show off your artwork. can also be used partial room or screen separators. Bulgac/Getty Images What are your eyes drawn to first in your living room? The highlight wall splits the space with color or texture. Add a highlighting wall to remove monotonous bare walls in a small space and give the room a natural top. Start small with color, or go big with an architectural accent. Avdic/Getty Images Who's ready to defy gravity? Floating furniture gives a futuristic feel to any room. It's aesthetically pleasing, beautiful and modern. Most importantly, by freeing up the floor space, you can create the illusion of more space even in the smallest rooms. Let your imagination run wild... and some houseplants! Each room can be brought to life with plants of all sizes and colors. Bare corners help with greenery, as well as empty shelves. Plants filter your air and bring a new look to the living room. In addition, plants make a house design and feel homier. aldornillo/Getty Images When in doubt, triple. Add three from a small accent at once to enhance the small living room. The important thing to keep in mind is that your decorating should show thought and purpose. By adding three of the same things-- a painting, a statue, a plant-- your care for your little space shines through. 1172217300 / Getty Images Antonio Larosa, a native of Milan, is chairman of SCAD's furniture department and the kind of designer who forces you to enter the revolution. American furniture design has been hibernating for fifty years, he told me earlier this week. I want to wake him up! PW: So you want to rediscover American furniture design. AL: When I first came to the US, I was surprised by how many furniture designers were misunderstood in this country. I was in an elevator in New York, that was in 1991, and a very nice lady made a living from me. I told her I was a furniture designer, and she started telling me about her wobbly library. She said, can you fix this for me? That's what people do in America when you tell them you're designing furniture! He thinks you're a repairman! PW: How is it different in Italy? They're going to take you out to dinner! You're a hero! They're not asking you to fix their tables. It's like telling someone you're designing cars, and they think you're a mechanic. This is even the mentality of furniture manufacturers in the US! Look at Charles Eames. His shaped chairs are still the freshest thing in American furniture design, and it was sixty years ago! I want to change that. PW: So how can we rediscover American furniture design? We need to convince American manufacturers that they need design. We need to get them away from thinking of us as lumberjacks. Furniture design is not about construction. There are already a million builders in other parts of the world who can do it more efficiently and more affordably than we do here. I want to take a bus full of students and go to every furniture fair and market and get to the speaker. Save your company! Hire working at High Point Market in North Carolina.PW: Why all that love of American design when you're from Milan? I grew up adoring American design! Florence Knoll, Charles Eames, they were my heroes. And when I got here, I saw he was gone, disappeared. I want to help you get it back. PW: Okay, so what are your favorite pieces of furniture? AL: I worship Thonet No. 14. This is the mother of a modern chair, designed in 1860. So brilliant! So simple! It's only six pieces. And see, Thonet uses innovative processes to create this chair-steaming wood. PW: What are the big trends in furniture design right now? Everything becomes common sense. I was at a leather company in Italy making Gucci handbags, and I noticed a huge pile of leftovers. They were throwing away this skin, so I took some samples, and I ended up creating a whole collection of furniture around this skin. I used the smallest pieces to create the tiny flowers that are part of the design. I called it Millifiori, which means a million flowers. You could call it sustainable design, but it makes more sense just to call it common-sense design. Design for key-ring from Millifiori Collection.PW: What was your proudest moment as a design educator? This spring, the Italian government sponsored our students to visit Milan. I introduced them to my mentor, Alessandra Mendini. He's older now, but still full of ideas. He showed them all his current projects: a coffee machine, a new kind of wine corkscrew, a briefcase and his concepts for a new museum that will be powered by sea waves. All this from a furniture designer! We ended our trip to Salone Internazionale del Mobile, where we were named the best international design school. The students were so happy! Here they were, in mecca international design, and SCAD young American designers took the top prize. The revolution has begun!
